New to the sights and sounds of a large city, Willie Budjet, colored, was lost yesterday soon after he had been brought here by his employer, Henry West, of Waverly, and is now numbered among the strayed sheep in the Colored City Mission.

Willie had long been in the employ of Mr. West, and when the latter decided to enter into business in Richmond he brought the faithful servant boy with him. He igit little Willie Blanks were served the Colts until the eighth. But the round thing with nothing in the middle should not have been their portion. Enough hits had been made and enough men had been on for a comfortable lead to have been established. Some tank base running caused all the trouble. There are a young million "ifs" which might be inserted here to show the why of it all, but the climax is so fresh and so brilliant that it would be like patting the men with one hand and hitting them with a brick with the other to tell all about it. The one glaring, bright particular thing is that the Colts won, and won despite the tonnage of four runs on their backs.

The peculiar part of it is that had nage of four runs on their backs.

The peculiar nart of it is that had the game been lost, Arthur Wallace, the hardest hitting fielder in the league, would have been to blame, and as it is he comes mighty nearly being the fellow who won it. His circuit swat in the ninth, when hope was dying fast, tied up the game and his double in the eighth started the rally which made the tie possible. All in all, it was his big day, and he established another league record, having batted 1,000 in two consecutive games. Thursday he made three safeties in as many trips, and to-day he topped it all and very nearly equaled Keliher's record, by making five out of five, including a homer and a double. It was his big day.

Incidentally Priest did look good at first. He is not sure of himself yet, but took the throws and fielded his position as if he was willing to stick at that station. Fourteen chances with not a fliver is not a poor fielding record by any means.

The whole team looked good. It looked like the champion machine it has been touted to be all season, with the possible exception of the way the

Just to show what effect one man's work may have on the outcome of the game, look at Walsh's performance. He had been prforming briliantly, accepting eight chances, but he wavered too long on Cowan's fly in the eighth, and when he did throw hit Wallace in the head, allowing an additional run to score and paving the way for another. In the sixth he came very near letting Martin's fly get away and squeezed it only after juggling for a while.

Baker wobbled on Kircher's nasty grounder in the first and Babb scored it is doubtful if he could have been held at third even had Baker fielded the ball cleanly.

Steve Griffin got a great hand when a came up for his first try in the Poole. He got caught going to second because Mattis failed to heed the hit and run signal which was waved.

Priest and Charles are the fastess men on the local club, and it takes fast work to head them once they get started. Charles also handles himself well in the garden. Take his quick work on Folles's drive in the third. It looked good for two, but the boy held him on first.

Dodge had a little luck in the Dodge had a little luck in the eighth."
He sacrificed, or rather tried to sacrifice, Babb down. The ball looked like it would roll foul, and both Hanks and Cowan watched it, but it struck close to the line, never rolling out, and both were safe, Dodge counting a hit.

Martin also came in for some luck in the eighth. His bounder to Babb took a nasty leap, and went over the vis-itor's head.

Priest was up five times, made four hits and stole four bases—a pretty hard record to live up to. Of the four hits credited to him three were in the dlamond.

The Pirates, with Wagner out for the season, seem to have dropped out of the race. The Giants loom large now, and it wouldn't be strange to see the world's championship series played in the East between the Giants and the Athletics. In fact, this seems probable now.
